In the 1970s, all of the five authors of Bullshot Crummond were members of a London based comedy group called Low Moan Spectacular. One of the writing team, Diz White bought a Bulldog Drummond novel in an antique bookshop and used it for inspiration and conceived a theatre spoof that became Bullshot Crummond written in conjunction with other members of the comedy group. The play was later made in to a 1983 film, Bullshot.
